

The adventure

Aryan met Abimanyu at the school of archery. Aryan attended the classes on time, completed all of his homework and assignments, and aced at his tests. Abimanyu bunked many classes, pulled pranks even on the teachers, and barely cleared the exams. Despite their differences, Abimanyu and Aryan spent a lot of time together riding horses and hunting. Many teachers advised Aryan that Abimanyu was a bad influence but it was with Abimanyu that Aryan had the maximum fun.

After completing the archery course, Abimanyu and Aryan traveled the world. Abhimanyu was enchanted by the cuisines at Napa Valley and decided to live there for a while and spend time cooking and baking. Aryan continued his journey meeting new people, befriending, falling in love, breaking few hearts, getting heartbroken, hitting rock bottom, and moving on. Aryan shared all the adventures he had with Abimanyu through letters. Even though they barely met Aryan and Abimanyu supported each other through thick and thin. Abimanyu's friendship was the only constant factor in Aryan's adventurous life.

After many years Aryan got tired of traveling and decided to quit traveling by making Magnus city the last stop. Aryan met Salma at Magnus city and they instantly liked each other. Salma and Aryan spent more time together. They traveled for a while and settled down for a while at Napa valley close to Abimanyu's new place. They got themselves jobs at a barn as caretakers for the horses. Every day they cleaned, trained, and fed horses. They went on long walks by the brook during the evening. The more they spent time together, the more they fell for each other. At night they sit on the barn roof and looked at the stars.

Salma's parents were happy that she had started dating someone for a long time. Aryan's parents were also happy about the news. Aryan renounced his royal duties and moved permanently to Napa valley to live with Salma. Aryan and Salma never got married but lived happily racing and rising horses and ponies.

They tended to the farm animals in the morning. They played in the evening and read at night. In course of time, they bought a barn of their own and built a cabin by the brook. They never got bored of the valley or each other and lived there for a long time.
